Re: Virtual Manufacturing Week!

I know we haven't been communicating as much as we have in the past and we will try to improve upon that soon. However, we did want to reach out with an opportunity for employees who have children or family members in middle or high school.

As you may know, our Department of Planning and Economic Development (PED) organizes an annual Manufacturing Day with tours of local businesses to help young people experience careers in the industry. This year, safety protocols prevented those tours from taking place, but PED developed an innovative solution with a virtual Manufacturing Week.

The free digital experience features six companies showcasing their facilities through secure Zoom meetings. It also includes company overviews and interviews with workers, who discuss their educational pathways and why they decided on advanced manufacturing for their careers. Jobs in finance, engineering, marketing / sales and human resources are also being discussed.

Manufacturing Week kicked off Monday - but there is still time for parents and students to sign up and participate. Find the schedule, videos, 3D tours of facilities and so much more at www.macombmfgday.com.

I hope some of our team will find this to be an interesting and positive experience for kids that have had their worlds changed so drastically.

Hope you are all safe and well.
